Admiral Stansfield Turner
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Admiral Turner:

I have reason to believe that I was one of the men involved in the sexual behavioral alteration programs of the Central Intelligence Agency.

During the year 1953, I noted a marked surge of personal sexual activity, which continued until about 1962. (This corresponds roughly to the time of the C.I.A. experiments which have just been made public.) In the fifteen years since that time, my sexual drive has diminished sharply.

As a loyal American, I do not wish to make any difficulty for your agency as a result of having been used as an unwitting subject. Rather, it is my desire to learn the type of the drug used on me, and to determine when I may purchase more of it. My wife is aware of this letter, and approves of my request.

Respectfully yours,

STAT
